

JOHN FARRELL

I have serious reservations about John's suitability for the priesthood. In the past many efforts have apparently been made to improve an abrasive and ego-directed attitude but to no avail.

His relationship with others is not overall a happy one and I see little chance of John being equipped to handle such a person-orientated role as that of the Priest.

He is unfortunately insensitive on a number of quite important issues.

While I intend speaking to John further and at some length about these matters before the end of term, I feel it is impossible for dramatic improvement to take place.
