Clergyman resigns

Archdeacon Daniels

ONE of Tasmania's most prominent Anglican clergy has resigned from the church.

Archdeacon Lou Daniels, rector and archdeacon of Burnie, held a number of leading positions in the Anglican Church.

The Bishop of Tasmania, the Rt Rev. Phillip Newell attended the major services at St George's Church, Burnie, yesterday to tell local Anglicans of Archdeacon Daniels' decision.

A prominent figure at both State and national levels, his resignation has shocked the church.

Archdeacon Daniels, a man of strong views and a forthright speaker, was a leading reformer in the church and in the community especially on social questions.

In the church he was a leader in the modernisation of the Liturgy and in the ordination of women.

As archdeacon he was responsible for all parishes between Latrobe, Smithton and Queenstown.

As rector of Burnie he gave strong support to the unemployed and to others socially and economically disadvantaged.

He is chairman of the Umina Park Home Board but did not attend last Thursday's opening of a new wing at the home.

Bishop Newell said yesterday Archdeacon Daniels had resigned for his own personal reasons.

Bishop Mervyn Stanton who lives in retirement at Sisters Beach will act as archdeacon and rector.

Boy in critical condition

AN 11-year-old Nabageena boy who was seriously injured in an accident in a hay shed on Saturday was transferred to the Royal Children's Hospital in Melbourne yesterday.

A police spokesperson said Nathan John Odgers and a 12-year-old boy from Irishtown had been playing among large round bales of hay in a shed on Saturday when the accident occurred at about 10 a.m.

The spokesperson said the hay bales fell, pinning the boy to the ground. Another bale fell on his chest causing serious internal injuries.

Smithton ambulance officers attended the scene, and the boy was taken to the North-West Regional Hospital in Burnie.

He was admitted to the intensive care unit at the Royal Children's Hospital where he was in a critical condition last night.

High water halts Derwent search

A POLICE search for a man missing in the Derwent River will resume today.

High water levels in the river near New Norfolk yesterday forced the suspension of the search for Jeremy Lockley (20), of Moonah.

Mr Lockley and two colleagues were thrown out of their aluminium dinghy into the river at about 6.10 p.m. on Friday.

The dinghy hit a railway bridge pylon and upended.

The two other occupants, Marco Lancey, of Claremont, and Jeff Button, of Moonah, were able to make it to the riverbank.

The river is flowing about 1.5 m above its usual level after recent rain.

Hobart Police Search and Rescue and local volunteers will return to the river this morning.
