Appalling as the circumstances were, then there was - and obviously down in the office, ~~Menzies~~ the CEO even sent me a message that he had advised the staff that I was not the whistle-blower that I'd been labelled, that the facts had been proved, that they were correct and he thanked me for making them, persisting until they became aware of the enormous risk not covered by insurance.

Geoff and Robert were like a breath of fresh air to us. Huge relief. They were a new breed. And then the second day - - -

PRESIDING MEMBER: What did you say to them your wider concerns?

MR MCGLENNON: Yes, sorry. At the end of all this, Geoff asked - make sure I'm right here; Geoff asked, "Now, before we go, are there other concerns, anything else?" I said, "Yes, there is. I've been waiting for the opportunity. The stress level from what I'm going to mention is for us has been equally as high as this building. In fact, it's worse." "What's the nature of this?" I either said, "It's a serious moral issue or at very least inappropriate behaviour." Geoff said, "You've seen from the memo we've been set up in this committee to investigate this thing, these issues."

MS CRAWFORD: The building.

MR MCGLENNON: Occ health and safety. "Don't go any further with that. It's being addressed by others." That made sense to us.

PRESIDING MEMBER: What did you actually say to them, though, about the nature of the issues that were worrying you?

MR MCGLENNON: That was as far as I went. I had
