

BSB [redacted] made an appointment to see me today at 1150 hours. He was with me about 20 minutes.

There were three main points to his conversation.

1. Mr Yorke had mentioned to Ms Palmer that Mr Yorke knew of BSB [redacted]'s relationship with another member of the School. BSB [redacted] wanted to know how Mr Yorke knew this, and why. I said I would ask Mr Yorke how it came up in the conversation.
2. BSB [redacted] explained that he had written letters to Bishop Noble in the belief that the Church should be informed of his experiences. He still believes that Archbishop Hollingworth and/or Mr Yorke will invite him to a meeting with them to present his side of the story. He was surprised to learn that the School had reported the matter to the Church, so he said.
3. He indicated that all the counselling and assistance he had received was of tremendous help. He mentioned for the first time in my hearing "hypnosis", and how the relaxation tape was he believed used with a trigger to create hypnosis. He believed that waving two fingers past his face cancelled the hypnosis, but he was worried that he did not know what the initial trigger was, and that he could react to it at some future stage in his life. We discussed this issue, and the unlikely nature of this occurring. He declared that he had not experienced any such triggering in the 21 months since he last saw Lynch.

I indicated to BSB [redacted] that his father should feel free to see me at any time if he or anyone in the family had any ongoing concerns.

Later this afternoon Mrs P J Bopf came to see me. She has had great difficulty preventing BSB [redacted] from publicising his alleged experiences in the form of English assignments, short stories etc.

She was particularly concerned that he had recently entered her classroom and called out at the top of his voice, "It looks like we're getting compensation!"
