To whom it may concern

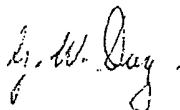

In the three years I have known Greg Knight, I have found him to be a sincere and genuine person upon whom one can rely. Part of this time I spent as a guitar teacher under Greg's leadership at our local high school. He moulded a completely new music faculty of which the school has become proud.

Greg's brilliance as a musician is unquestionable. The work and activities which he programmed were imaginatively constructed, and enthusiastically and carefully taught. Students became readily involved in their work and achieved a very satisfactory standard. Greg thrives in a musical environment, and hence the friendly rapport that grew amongst his music students, enabling a harmonious working atmosphere. He dealt tactfully but firmly where discipline was needed and it was this genuine concern for the well-being of students that has led to high respect amongst the student body.

An enthusiastic and responsible teacher, Greg has a concerned and considered approach to the teaching profession. He spent endless additional hours, lunch-times and off-lessons, in preparation and bringing the orchestral students to a high and most praiseworthy standard.

His honesty, reliability and well-organised manner, coupled with a cheerful and willing character is an asset to any teaching staff. I have no hesitation in recommending Greg Knight for any position in which music and teaching are involved.

Yours sincerely,

Gregory Day. B.Ed.
