

2/9/92

Prior to lunch on Friday, 28 August, the entire senior school had a P.D. lesson. Nicky was assigned to first lunch duty but as she was not feeling well I relieved her. All of the students had their lunch on the balcony and as it was windy and cool we decided to allow them into the library when they had finished their lunch. I stood in the outside doorway watching both students in the library and on the balcony finishing their lunch. Margaret was the assistant on duty and she watched those in the library as well. The students tended to be a little more active than usual since - often the case on windy days.
 Some were drawing, some doing puzzles, ^{reading} or just talking. We were advised of a couple of problem students to particularly pay attention to for various reasons. [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] were showing a renewed interest in each other, [REDACTED] was in a particularly aggressive mood and there were a couple of others who could be potentially problematic of the circumstances, allowed for it. I truly do not recall seeing either [REDACTED] or [REDACTED] specifically but I was watching all exits as much as possible to ensure that no student left the library or the adjoining porch.

We were relieved from duty at 12:50 by Sr. Marie and Barbara.

Bruce Klus