For Sean Fewster

From Archbishop Philip Wilson

I am pleased that the justice system has made the decision it did today.

I re-emphasise my concern again for the students and their families which is the reason why I made the offer of a gift to them last year.

I am pleased to say that more than 95 per cent of families have accepted the offer, or are in the process of accepting the offer, which will assist them in supporting these young people into the future, including counselling if parents decide that is what they need.

I'm also encouraged to have received some very positive feedback from some of the families I have met with and from others I spoken with.
