INTRODUCTION

What is the 'Guide to Out-of-Home Care Services' ?

There are many people who were placed in out-of-home care services as children who would like have a look their files and records.

However, these records are held by organisations which may have changed their administrative and auspice arrangements over the years. This can make the search for records difficult.

It was felt that a guide which would identify previous service locations, link those locations to past and current auspice agencies and identify these agencies access to records policies could be of assistance.

A particular focus of the Guide to Out of Home Care Services are indigenous children and young people who were part of the 'Stolen Generations'.¹

Obviously other children and young people may also have an interest in obtaining their records including

- State wards
- Immigrant children
- Indo-Chinese - refugee minors
- Sec 35 (voluntary admission to Wardship) children
- Adoptees - non-relative relative
- Protection and care clients
- Foster children - ward
non-ward

¹ On 1 February 2000, the Minajalku Center met with the Hon Christine Campbell, Minister for Community Services to seek support for Community Services Organizations in implementing recommendations from the report of the National Inquiry into the Separation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders ("the Bringing Them Home Report").

In response to this meeting, the Child Protection and Juvenile Justice Branch ("CP&JJ") provided funds to the Archival Services Unit of the Business Development Branch to research the details of all Non Government Organizations involved in the placement and care of children since 1940.

The Project aims to be complementary to existing data, such as the publication A Piece of the Story and current initiatives to enhance access to records, such as the work of the Victorian Koorie Records Taskforce and the Children's Welfare Association of Victoria.

- Children placed voluntarily in approved children's homes
- Children placed as wards in specialist facilities (eg those caring for disabled or sight impaired children).

The Guide to Out-of-Home Care Services provides a resource to those professional agencies which assist people previously involved in the residential and substitute care system gain access to their records, if requested and where those records are available.

Agencies currently working with previous clients in this way include

- Department of Human Services Archival Services
- Department of Humans Services Freedom of Information Unit
- 'Link Up'
- The Adoption Information Service
- Child and family care agencies with historical links to earlier services

Scope

The Guide aims to list every government and community service organisation out-of-home care service established for children and young people in Victoria from 1940 to the present time. The listing will identify the service, its auspice at the time, auspice changes and current auspice agency policy on access to the records of children previously in care. The location of the records of defunct auspice organisations will also be noted where this information is available.

At this stage the Guide does not include information on Government psychiatric or intellectual disability services which may also have provided care for wards.

What were the Out-of Home Care/Substitute Care Services in question?

Out-of-home care services provide short and long term care for children and young people as a substitute for parental or home based care or as a response to the welfare and containment needs of young offenders

Over the years these have included both government and community service organisation facilities and services such as:

- Babies Homes/Maternity Hospitals
- Reception Centres

- Orphanages/Children's Homes
- Family Group Homes/Cottage Homes
- Foster Care and Permanent Care Programs and Agencies
- Adoption Agencies
- Youth Hostels
- Secure Welfare Services
- Youth Training Centres -
 - Government
 - Non-Government
- Residential Youth Welfare Services
- Specialist residential facilities for children and young people
- Other approved community services

Agencies Access to Records Policies and Procedures.

All of the major auspice agencies operating in Victoria were asked to provide the following information in relation to client records:

Holdings

Institutions covered, time span of the records, nature of the records held.

Arrangement

Location of records, indexing, searching aids (lists, registers etc).

Access Policy

General availability of records and any specific restrictions to access.

Access Procedures

Contact details for access to records, copies of any application forms, information on any fees, level of support given to ex-clients accessing records.

The information obtained from this process has been included in this volume of the Guide.

The right of non-government agencies to retain the confidentiality of their records and implement their own access policies is integral to the development of this Guide.

It is also understood that some agencies archival capacity may be limited and require development some time in the future.

Guide Presentation

At this stage of development the Guide has two major components presented on one floppy disk and in two separate hard copy volumes.

Component 1 - A searchable data base on disc containing all services down to family group home level, identifying service location and auspice agencies. (A hard copy of this material is contained in Volume 1)

Component 2 A separate brief historical overview of the major service and auspice entities, with details of agencies access to records policies. (Volume 2)

Component 1. The Searchable Data Base (Using FileMaker Pro)

The current version of the data-base lists over 1000 individual facilities or service entities. This information has been drawn from Department of Human Services archival files, annual reports and information provided by agencies and other sources. This can be searched by any key word in any field and a wide variety of lists and printouts can be generated.

Component 2. Agency Descriptions

This component consists of short historical overview of each major auspice agency or service, tracing its establishment, closure, amalgamation or relocation.

A summary of current auspice agencies access to records policies and contact details is included in this component where this information is available.

Acknowledgement

The material in this Guide relies heavily on memorandum, correspondence, reports and other material contained in the Department of Human Services archives. In addition, agency historical material ranging from small one page overviews to formal commissioned histories have been an invaluable source of information.

A general statement on sources and further reading has been included at the end of each entry, although it has not been possible to site the full range of sources used for each entry.

Further Work

A good deal of ground has been covered with this project, however it is acknowledged that there are omissions and areas needing further development. These issues will be addressed in later editions of the Guide.

A project of this nature also requires ongoing correction as information is cross checked and expansion as new information comes to hand.

Additional material or other suggestions to improve the Guide should be forwarded to:

DEPARTMENTAL CLIENT RECORDS

Access to Departmental Client Records for Wards, Youth Trainees, Probationers and other ex-Departmental Clients

The Department of Human Services has developed specific policies and procedures to assist people wishing to access individual or family records. It also provides services for people wishing to locate and reunify with other family members.

The following Departmental units assist with access to records and family reunion inquiries

- Freedom of Information Unit
- Adoption Information Service
- Archival Services

Freedom of Information (FOI)

The Freedom of Information Act gives ex wards of the Department, juvenile justice clients and other clients of Departmental services the right to view the information in their records and files.

The FOI Act allows access to personal records irrespective of how long they have been held by the Department. In relation to individual records, the Department requires the personal approval and identification of the applicant. Information about persons other than the applicant which might be on the file is not provided.

A request must be accompanied by an application fee of $20. This application fee may be waived or reduced in cases of hardship. A charge may also be made for the provision of copies of documents.

A copy of the Department's Freedom of Information Form can be found on page xxx although requests in letter form will also be processed.

Applications under Freedom of Information Provisions should be made to:

Freedom of Information Unit
Department of Human Services
555 Collins Street
Melbourne 3000
96167777

Adoption Information Service (AIS)

The Adoption Information Service was established in 1985 under the Adoption Act 1985. Persons eligible to apply for records under the Adoption Act provisions are adopted persons, children of adopted persons, birth parents, birth relatives and adoptive parents. The legislation and the Adoption Information Service provide the opportunity for those separated by adoption to obtain information from adoption and court records and to locate their family of origin.

Counselling, support and assistance is available from AIS to assist people deal with the any emotional stress involved in accessing records as well as issues of loss and grief. Whilst AIS offers these services to Indigenous ex-clients of the Department, they often prefer to accept assistance from LINK-UP, the Victorian Aboriginal Child Care Agency or other members of the Aboriginal community and are referred accordingly.

The AIS also provides an information service for ex-guardianship (ex-ward and juvenile justice) clients of the Department. The same range of service provided in the adoption situation are provided to ex-guardianship clients.

Actual access to files is still mediated through Freedom of Information provisions via the FOI Unit but AIS will facilitate access under those provisions. After receiving information from their ward or youth welfare files, clients may then contact AIS for assistance to locate their families, or to discuss the information they have received. Where a non-government agency has been involved, clients will be advised (and assisted) to contact the relevant agency directly to access any records held by that agency.

The Adoption Information Service can be contacted at:

Adoption Information Service
Department of Human Services

Melbourne 3000
Ph 96167777

Archival Services

The Department of Human Services Archival Services Section locates, and can release to the general public as 'open records', information on children 99 years after the creation of a record and 75 years for adults. These records may be held at DHS Archival Services in Bourke Street or at the Public Records Office in North Melbourne.

All other individual case files and registers held by Archival Services are 'closed' and available only within the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act or the Adoption Act 1984.

It is Archival Service's role to register and store all files for retrieval if required.

Generally, requests for client information are dealt with in the first instance by the Freedom of Information Unit and the Adoption Information Service, both of which work closely with Archival Services to facilitate the provision of information to ex-departmental clients.
