Jon Doust

Jon Doust has had diverse careers. He was born in Bridgetown into a farming/retailing family and worked in both until he was old enough to know better. Since then he has been asked to leave jobs in banking, the media, retailing (again), farming (again) and comedy. These days he is best known as a writer, professional speaker, social agitator and community projects facilitator.

His first adult novel, Boy on a Wire, was long listed for the Miles Franklin literary award last year. Jon attended Christ Church Grammar School in the early 60's and was once given the cane for an incident on this very campus. Some years ago he asked himself the question: Why are people the way they are? That led him to study Jungian psychology and to becoming an accredited deliverer of a number of Jungian based psychological models. None of this has dampened his sense of humour.

These days he lives in Albany and today he will tell us why, and, hopefully, offer a few tips on how to maintain a sense of humour.
