Although it is perhaps out of my province to be writing to you at all about this matter, still I am taking the liberty of asking you to ensure that the most careful investigation is made concerning these charges ...where evidence of serious misconduct is sustained, a Canonical Warning does not always meet the situation and I think the question of dismissal should be considered. [Brs Alonzo and Salvius] .. if memory serves me correctly, that similar charges were preferred on some former occasion.... I find it difficult to accept the claim that he did not realise that his conduct in Clontarf was very dangerous and very unseemly. His instincts would surely warn him. In any case it would seem that he has a most dangerous weakness to say the least."	TB4:122
