Interview with Rhonda O'Sign, Little Athletics Tasmania, about workshops with Braveheart aimed at keeping children safe. O'Sign says the program is called Supporting Hands and looks at misperceptions about the offenders of sexual assault as well as looking at the figures of sexual assault while teaching people who work with children on how to report concerns. O'Sign says Little Athletics had a presentation by Hetty Johnston which was seen as useful. She says sexual assault can come from anyone, not just strangers, so it is important to be aware. O'sign says Queensland Little Athletics also had a presentation and Burden says the association, alongside Queensland Police Child Protection Unit, are taking the issue seriously. O'sign says all organisations have a responsibility to teach their members how to respond to disclosures and how to identify indicators of harm to children.
