

Gold Coast Sun
Edition 3 - GC Sun TweedTHU 30 MAR 2006, Page 018
Abuse alleged

TOMMY Campion's decision to sue the Anglican Church for 'justice and recognition' of the hurt he says he suffered as a child has led to what is believed to be Australia's biggest 'abuse' legal action. More than 90 former inmates of the North Coast Children's Home, Lismore, are being represented by Brisbane lawyer Simon Harrison, of Nicol Robinson Halletts. The Anglican Diocese of Grafton has adopted a co-operative and conciliatory approach to the case. Diocese registrar, the Rev. Pat Comben, has moved quickly to provide support and launch an investigation. The former Queensland environment minister, who is now an Anglican minister, said he was saddened by the stories of people like Mr Campion, and that legal action would 'considerably delay' the Christian support the church could provide. He said difficulties were compounded by the large number of people coming forward with great and loving stories of their time at the home.

✓ © Copyright. All rights reserved. Most articles on Newstext are copyright News Limited. Some copyright is owned by third parties. You may read this article on-screen or print it once for your own personal use. You may not make further copies, forward it by email, post it on an internet or intranet site or make any other use of it without written permission from us. These and any copyright licensing queries should be sent to us at newstext@newsLtd.com.au

Gold Coast Sun
Edition 1 - GC Sun NorthWED 29 MAR 2006, Page 012
Suing 'for
'justice'

TOMMY Campion's decision to sue the Anglican Church for 'justice and recognition' of the hurt he says he suffered as a child has led to what is believed to be Australia's biggest 'abuse' legal action. More than 90 former inmates of the North Coast Children's Home, Lismore, are being represented by Brisbane lawyer Simon Harrison, of Nicol Robinson Halletts. The Anglican Diocese of Grafton has adopted a co-operative and conciliatory approach to the case. Diocese registrar the Rev Pat Comben has moved quickly to provide support and launch an investigation. The former Queensland environment minister, who is now an Anglican minister, said he was saddened by the stories of people like Mr Campion, and that legal action would 'considerably delay' the Christian support the church could provide. He said difficulties were compounded by the large number of people coming forward with great and loving stories of their time at the home.

© Copyright. All rights reserved. Most articles on Newstext are copyright News Limited. Some copyright is owned by third parties. You may read this article on-screen or print it once for your own personal use. You may not make further copies, forward it by email, post it on an internet or intranet site or make any other use of it without written permission from us. These and any copyright licensing queries should be sent to us at newstext@newsLtd.com.au