Dear Const Madsen,

RE: GRANT DAVIES & SEIZURE OF PROPERTY

We refer to previous communications regarding this matter and note that our client has not received the return of his property still retained by Police. We note further that we have not received any written response to our letter of 6 June 2007 seeking return of our client's property.

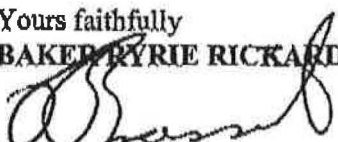

In our view, sufficient time has now elapsed since our client's property was seized for your office, or, more correctly, Police Scientific Branch, to have examined our client's property and for Police to have concluded that there is no evidence of the commission of any offence on our client's computer. We are now confident that a subpoena of your records relating to this matter will show that no evidence has arisen from any further examination of our client's property.

We are instructed to put you on notice that any further detention of our client's property has no proper foundation in law. Further, since there is no proper foundation for the continued holding of our client's property, such detention is accordingly unlawful and constitutes grounds for an action in damages in detainee. We note you have repeatedly ignored our requests for our client to retrieve the personal and commercial data on the computer. This is evidence of your lack of bona fides in this matter.

Our client's property should be returned to our client instanter.

We reserve the right to tender copies of this correspondence, and evidence of the transmission of the contents herein to you, to any relevant Court or Tribunal in support of any relevant claim or complaint and especially on the question of costs.

Yours faithfully
