>>Dear Dr. de Campo,

>>Thank you for your response. It actually took a lot of courage to send you what I did. When I read your response I suddenly felt like a huge load had been lifted from me to have it out in the open. I have been haunted for so many years by the fact that this disgusting man may still be working (volunteering?) at a hospital and my fear that this would possibly attract media/public attention has prevented him from being stopped. I also want some revenge and now feel strong and confident enough about myself to be able to put the wheels in motion to hopefully achieve this. If the investigation and his identification is going to give him even half the agony that I and who knows how many others have been through, not only while in the RCH, but also mentally for several years later, I will be very satisfied.

>>I will tell you my name AWI, bornRED, 1968) now because I trust that you will only reveal it to persons who can assist in the investigation. I imagine the hospital and yourself are just as opposed to having this made public as I am. Your confirmation of my assumption would be appreciated.

>>Perhaps you are wondering why I suddenly had the courage to bring this to your attention - probably because of the convenience of writing something and pressing the send button while I had the courage and also because I am very happy with my life and career - this is the one thing that haunts me though. I've been living in Japan (this time) for 4 years straight and this trip back to Australia will be the longest since leaving. I will tell you now that I am hoping you will have at least identified the man (Harry) and started a thorough investigation before I return to Japan around January 31. Over the years particulary during my late teens I often had thoughts/nightmares about having the opportunity to kill him. No, I don't need "help", given the experience this is probably quite a normal feeling to have.

>>I would like to ask that you do not contact my parents - they would die if they suddenly had a phone call out of the blue about this. They know nothing about the harassment. I am the eldest of 7, and my mother in particular has enough worries without this - it really is the last thing either of them need to deal with.

>>I presume you will try and access my history and it probably portrays me as a very disturbed teenager. I can recall a psychiatrist/psychologist?
