Dear Jennifer,

I am very touched by your kind thoughts and I am so very pleased that you are feeling somewhat better.

Jennifer, many things resonated with me last Friday, not least, your request to be treated by the church as an "important" person.

It seems to me that is the very least you are entitled to expect, and it is a work in progress in terms of the church treating you with the respect and dignity you deserve, inclusive of your meeting with the Bishop on 24 June.

I am confident this meeting will be for you a very positive experience, and will do my very best to ensure that is the case.

Jennifer, you are a remarkable person and those of us at the meeting on Friday were struck by your outstanding courage and generosity of spirit in the face of great personal adversity. It is easy to see why "team Jennifer" has been there for you.

In the meantime Jennifer, I do trust that you and Lindsay will have a truly wonderful holiday with plenty of R & R.

Again thanks for taking time out to offer some kind thoughts, your gesture is much appreciated.

Kind Regards and Best Wishes,

Michael Salmon

Dear Michael

I need to thank you with my heart for the respect you showed me last Friday at the facilitation. It was an extraordinary day. It was very draining for all of us. It was painful for me. You are a very lovely man Michael. You managed the facilitation very well.

"Team Jennifer" helped me be resilient. My sister and brother are still grieving. I am starting to feel good now.

I got to say what was important. I am disappointed in Father Mulchay. But I will let that go. To receive the letter from the Bishop is very important. I have over the last days started to feel free of the blackness that has been part of me for so long.

I am grateful you will be at the meeting with the Bishop. My brother will fly in from Sydney to be with me. Even though the meeting is for me to talk with the Bishop, perhaps this will help him get closure too.

Again I just wanted to ensure you knew I genuinely appreciated you on Friday.

My husband and I are going on a holiday for a few weeks. We leave tomorrow. We are both still exhausted. It will be nice to get on that plane and leave the last weeks behind us

Kind regards

Jennifer Ingham
