Dear Jennifer,

I do earnestly hope as you process your recent experiences with the Church that significant healing occurs for you.

I am confident that it will, and I am sure that the Bishop's letter of apology will be significantly helpful in that regard, but as you allude to in your email there is no substitute for 'team Jennifer' in terms of the power of your family and friend's love and support.

Jennifer, I personally appreciate the kind words. They mean a lot. And, as I stated at the meeting I am here to offer assistance over the longer term so don't hesitate to drop me an email or to telephone at any time.

Jennifer for now, kind regards and best wishes.

Kind regards,
Michael Salmon

Director of Professional Standards Office

Good afternoon Michael

I wanted to again thank you for being at the meeting with the Bishop. Again your facilitation was the key. I found this meeting very hard, perhaps hearing my brother for the first time tell of the truth about his own grief with Brown was very very painful.

Michael, I have so much trust in you and what you say and I sense your conviction to support people like myself. Thank you.

I found the Bishop to be very genuine. I also found him to be naïve, or perhaps more so really struggling with the truth of the depraved within the church's history. He is a good man and I am sorry that he has to represent the wrongs of others.

It has turned out that it was important for me to have that meeting. I am a tad down, but I also realise that this journey was tough, but necessary and time will heal me. I have a powerful sense of love from my friends and family. I am so very fortunate.

With much gratitude

Jennifer

Dear Michael

I hope you are well. We have not long returned from our holiday. It was much needed and I feel good. I have a tremendous husband Michael, I have started to feel better in general, like I can breathe easier.

I should have emailed earlier. Is it appropriate that my brother and I can meet with you prior the meeting with the Bishop. I also appreciate that at such late notice this may not be possible. If this is possible can we meet at 9.00 near by. Michael my mobile is REDACTED.

Again my apologies for the late communication.

Kind regards

Jennifer

Hello David.

The meeting will occur on Monday 24 June 2013 at the Archbishop Rush Centre which is next door to the Cathedral in Elizabeth St.

The tentative time is 10 am to 12 noon however I still do not have confirmation of this. I was waiting for confirmation before advising you but I don't expect any change. You can make plans on this basis. To a large extent the duration depends on Jennifer and how she is coping. For example she may need breaks. The other participants accept it may take longer however I think scheduling 2 hours will be about right.

Please advise if this is suitable.

Yours faithfully.

Bernadette Rogers.
