Dear Sir,

This is a private letter. It is not an easy one to write, nor will it be easy to read. I hope, however, that our mutual concern for the welfare of children will excuse it.

I have, in recent years, given a great deal of thought to the essential qualities necessary for success in the head of a children's institution. There are many desirable qualities for such a position, but it has seemed to me that a personal compassionate concern for the feelings of each inmate is the essential quality in a Manager. I am still to be persuaded that you have that quality in a sufficient degree to meet the needs of the boys at Hollywood. I will be very willing indeed to be persuaded during the coming year.

With sincere good wishes for success in your work,

Yours faithfully,

DIRECTOR.
