

SCENARIO 1CHILD

Your name is Josh and you are 15 years old. You have bruising to your left upper arm. You got the injury trying to stop your dad punching your mum in the face last night. It is not the first time this has happened. But your dad has never hit you or your younger two siblings. You haven't told anyone but you are really worried about your mum. You're angry at your dad but scared of what would happen to him if you told. You really want this to stop.

SCENARIO 1COUNSELLOR

You notice that Josh who is 15 years old has bruising on his left upper arm. Josh is the oldest of three siblings. An opportunity arises for you to initiate a discussion about how he got the bruise.

SCENARIO 2CHILD

Your name is Belinda and you are 11 years old. You're on a day camp excursion at a swimming pool and refuse to get undressed and change into your bathers. When the counsellor tries to encourage you to change you burst into tears. You come from a large, loving family but over the last few months your uncle who is in his 30's has been staying with you and he has come into your room on several occasions and asked you to play games with him. These games include you getting undressed in front of him. It makes you feel very uncomfortable but you're scared to tell your parents in case you get into trouble.

SCENARIO 2COUNSELLOR

You are on a day camp excursion at a swimming pool and are supervising the girls getting changed in the changing room. Belinda who is 11 years old flatly refuses to get changed – even when you offer her a private space to do it. And when you try to encourage her to do it she bursts into tears.
